March 2019 Newsletter

Announcements

New Look on the ESE Webpage
Please check out the new and exciting changes that are happening on the ESE webpage. This includes, “Departmental Seminar”, and both “Graduate” and Undergraduate Student” pages. More changes will be coming. Stay tuned!

Fall 19 Courses
The Fall 2019 course schedule is now available online. Students should start looking and preparing for the courses, they wish to take for the Fall semester. In addition, students should put their course list into their "Registration Worksheet" on Webstac in preparation of meeting with their advisor. For planning your courses, please click here for a list of our expected course offerings for the next two years.

The following special topics or newly revised courses are being offered in Fall 2019:
Prof. Chuan Wang, Assistant Professor, ESE 436 Semiconductor Devices
Prof. J-T Shen, Associate Professor, ESE 429 Basic Principles of Quantum Optics and Quantum Information

Please Note: Advising period for Engineering students will be held April 1-12, 2019 for Fall 2019 registration.

Villa Published in SIAM News
ESE Assistant Research Professor, Umberto Villa, was recently featured in SIAM News with collaborators from The University of Texas, MIT, New York University, and University of California. In the article, they shared their gratifying experiences in organizing and teaching the 2018 Gene Golub Summer School on Bayesian Inverse Problems, which took place last summer. Their proposal to organize the school was selected from among 10 applications by a panel of distinguished reviewers, and awarded over $130,000 to support attendance of 43 graduate students.
